To the City Council and the People of Santa Fe,

It has often—and correctly—been said that a budget is a moral document. How we dedicate our public resources reflects our core values.

A budget is also a strategic document. It provides the ways and means to realize our core values.

A budget that combines a moral compass and an investment strategy creates both a vision for our future and a roadmap to achieve that vision. Our aspirations for Santa Fe are both lofty and achievable: We aim for greatness in every part of our city's life and for everyone in our city:

We will make City government work for everyone.

We will help those who need the most help.

We will preserve, protect and advance our history, art and culture.

We will create housing and livable neighborhoods, balanced with graceful growth.

We will create good jobs and rewarding careers for everyone.

We will make Santa Fe sustainable.

This budget articulates those values and turns those aspirations into action.

This budget demonstrates a clear moral compass that guides our choices: in it we commit ourselves to offering a strong and steady helping hand to those who most need help. With our ARPA money as well as our General Fund dollars, we seek to house those who are experiencing homelessness, support those who need direct assistance to pursue a Community College education, train those looking for a good paying job, provide economic assistance to small and medium-size businesses hit hard by the COVID pandemic, offer counseling to those struggling with mental and behavioral health issues, and provide better choices to young people who might otherwise fall prey to a bad decision that can sidetrack a life.

Our values shine through in our commitment to sustainability. With this budget we continue to drive Santa Fe to the forefront of renewable energy, water conservation, water re-use and forward-looking water planning. In it we invest in sensible land use planning that reinforces a sustainable way of life based on a sustainable pattern of living. This budget launches a new initiative to create a "green bank" that our residents can use to make investments that will both reduce their individual cost of living and also reduce our community's carbon footprint.

In this budget we continue to balance our commitment to respond to the ongoing need for more affordable housing and our pledge to preserve, protect and enhance our unmatched quality of life. With this budget, we will grow—and grow gracefully. We continue to invest in a broad-based and diversified economy, with good jobs and good wages not only for the current generation of workers, but also for our children and grandchildren.

A budget is a moral document. It is also a strategic one. The investments that are made through this budget represent commitments to the city we will have inherited, to the city we will shape in the year ahead and to the City we aspire to be in the years to come.

As always, our strategic investments begin with our people, the women and men who do their best each day to make Santa Fe the best place to live every day. In this budget we are proposing the equivalent of an 8% raise for all City employees. In addition, we have budgeted a $2,000 per person retention incentive to keep our talented and experienced team with us in a highly competitive job market. We continue to offer a $1,000 signing incentive to help fill critically important City jobs. In the challenging area of recruiting, hiring and retaining Santa Fe police officers, we are proposing the equivalent of a 16% pay increase, as well as a $15,000 per person incentive for lateral transfers of experienced officers into our police department from other jurisdictions. We also create a $750,000 down payment assistance fund to provide home-buying help to the men and women who are our first responders. We want them to be able to live in the city they help protect.

A second strategic theme of this budget is the deliberate, intentional re-shaping of the City workforce to reflect current and future priorities. In other jurisdictions and at other times, governments have spoken about “down-sizing” or “right-sizing” the workforce. We reject both of those descriptions.

Our measure of success is not defined by the size of our government. When it comes to serving the people of Santa Fe, we know that a City government that is bigger isn’t better; nor is a smaller one better. Only better is better. To make the City government better, we are moving the positions we have from the past to match the needs we have for the future. Positions will go to the service areas in City government where the residents of Santa Fe are telling us they assign the greatest priority. Responding to those calls for service is how we make City government not bigger, not smaller, but better.

This budget is built on strategic investments; it is also strategic in how we think about budgeting. For the first time in years, Santa Fe is blessed with multiple streams of revenue that we can put to very good uses. We have money from the Federal government that we can invest in much-needed social programs, economic development and job training programs, and community health and safety initiatives. We have a variety of revenue streams from the State government that we can devote to critical capital improvements in every part of the City, job creation for people across Santa Fe and environmental upgrades for future generations of Santa Feans. We also intend to bring a GRT-backed bond to the market in the early Fall. We will use those additional revenues to do even more in the way of meeting our long list of critical capital investment projects.

This budget matches the source of the funding to the targeted strategic investment. As a matter of sound fiscal management, we distinguish between one-time expenditures and recurring expenditures, between operating investments and capital investments, between projects that will be funded and completed in one year and projects that will be begun this year but will need to be nurtured and funded in future budgets. Those careful calculations represent another level of strategy that we have practiced in this budget.

Another strategic element of this budget is reflected in our way of thinking, not of the budget, but of budgeting. In some governments, the budget process is “one and done”: A budget is proposed, after debate and adjustment it is adopted, and it is a done deal for the next fiscal year.

That is neither our thinking nor our practice when it comes to budgeting. As soon as a budget is adopted for the coming Fiscal Year, we will begin another round of discussions with members of the City Council and City Departments. Our aim is to continue to refine, adapt and amend the budget on an ongoing basis. We anticipate that our revenue streams will continue to evolve. We know that our service needs will continue to evolve. From COVID we have learned to expect the unexpected when it comes to the budget. With all that in mind, as we move into the new Fiscal Year we will bring new budget adjustments forward as a continuing process of budgeting, assessing, adapting, refining and improving.

We think of it this way: The City budget is as much a verb as a noun. We are budgeting on an on-going basis and as a result we are producing an ever-improving budget.

The Charter calls for the Mayor to produce and offer the budget. While I am proud to sign this letter to submit the budget to the City Council and to the people of Santa Fe, this budget rightly belongs to our City Department heads and City employees. These are the talented women and men who every day give their best so the women and men who live and work in Santa Fe can live their best. This budget is built on their unstinting service, their unbridled enthusiasm and their unlimited vision. It takes a team to build a budget and then to deliver on the promises of that budget, and the City of Santa Fe is truly fortunate to have an exceptional team of City employees guiding our City government.

I am honored and excited to be able to present the proposed budget for the City of Santa Fe, as required by City Charter. Thank you for your good work and your support in advancing the great cause that is our Santa Fe.

Alan Webber
Mayor

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

IV. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

After persevering together through the COVID-19 pandemic, Santa Feans are in the middle of a recovery that offers us a once-in-a-generation opportunity to transform the City of Santa Fe into a more just and prosperous city. Heading into a transformative year, the FY23 Recommended Budget builds on the Mayor and the City Council's collaboration to set a fiscally sustainable course for the City of Santa Fe, while investing in shared priorities to deliver exceptional services to build a better city for Santa Feans.

We are listening to our community. This budget focuses on restoring core and essential services that were reduced or deferred during the onset of the pandemic; at the same time, we are finding ways to innovate in the delivery of those services. Federal economic stimulus aid was approved in the American Recovery Plan Act (ARPA) for the City of Santa Fe which will support the City's expansion of key social services, business and facilities, parks and trails over the next 3 years.

The FY23 Recommended Budget also continues to invest in our workforce. The men and women who work for the City have made extraordinary efforts to keep Santa Fe operating during the pandemic and have provided opportunities to modernize government. The result are improved residents' experiences from the way their government operates.

FY23 Recommended Expenditures

The FY23 Recommended Budget meets the City's financial obligations, including debt service and health insurance cost increases, and leverages the City's resources into shared goals. The recommended FY23 All Funds expenditures of $382.8 million reflects an increase of $25.5 million, or 7.1 percent, when compared to pre-pandemic levels in FY19. The recommended FY23 All Funds expenditures of $382.8 million reflects a decrease of $3.5 million, or 0.9 percent, when compared to the FY22 mid-year budget which utilized one-time reserves to support expenditures. The recommended FY23 General Fund expenditures total $124.0 million which is a decrease of $4.8 million, or 3.7 percent, from the FY22 budgeted levels at mid-year which utilized one-time reserves to support expenditures.

Making Santa Fe sustainable

- The City is investing a $500,000 to create a Clean Energy Fund. This Fund would be used to reduce the city's carbon footprint and move rapidly toward meeting its 2040 carbon neutral goals. Transitioning away from carbon sources requires renewable energy-based electricity and electrifying gas appliances, coupled with energy efficiency. Energy efficiency has been shown to be one of the most effective, lowest cost approaches for reducing carbon emissions. A Clean Energy Fund would contract with a provider in order to provide low-cost capital, loan-loss reserves to reduce lending risk, and other mechanisms necessary to enable Santa Fe households to access rooftop solar and energy efficiency, focusing particularly on lower-income communities. The money would be used initially to contract with a non-profit to provide research and a business plan for an ongoing Clean Energy Fund (or Green Bank); to look for grants from Federal and State governments; and to identify ways to provide financial support for Santa Fe residents who would reduce their own and the community's carbon footprint by a variety of means including but not limited to energy conservation, solarization, and other investments and strategies that would help the City meet its sustainability goals as the return on investment.
- Environmental Services Division budgeted $2.4 million for the CNG station repayment lease.

Keeping Santa Fe safe and secure

- $70,000 for a Wildfire Evacuation Analysis.
- $100,000 to create a Police Department station in City Hall.
- $750,000 for a First Responder Down Payment Assistance Program which is aimed to increase home ownership opportunities in Santa Fe for our police officers, firefighters, and EMTs. This program is also designed to promote safety in neighborhoods by encouraging

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

FY23 Revenues

The global pandemic brought the period of the longest economic expansion in U.S. history to an unexpected and sudden end. During the onset of the pandemic, businesses in Santa Fe closed—some temporarily, some permanently—and the unemployment rate soared to one of the highest rates seen in the last several decades. Making early fiscally responsible decisions in 2020 gave the City the ability to function effectively through the uncertainty of this crisis and into the recovery and rebuilding period. Despite these challenges, the City continues to be in a solid financial position, while exercising caution in response to mixed economic signals. Recurring City revenues are forecast to exceed pre-pandemic levels due to stronger gross receipts tax collections, the implementation of internet sales tax in FY22 and inflation. All other revenues are expected to see stable but more modest growth.

The budgeted FY23 All Funds revenue of $382.9 million reflects an increase of $21.9 million, or 6.1 percent, when compared to pre-pandemic levels in FY19. This increase reflects significant recovery since the downturn. The budgeted FY23 All Funds revenue of $382.9 million reflects an increase of $3.5 million, or 0.9 percent, when compared to the FY22 mid-year budget which utilized one-time reserves. Santa Fe's largest funding source is tax revenue, accounting for 44.3 percent of all revenues. Of that category, 81 percent comes from gross receipts taxes, 7 percent from property taxes and 12 percent from other taxes, such as the lodgers' tax. Service fees, primarily from the City's utilities, account for 35 percent of total revenue. The budgeted FY23 General Fund revenue of $124 million reflects an increase $19.5 million, or 18.7 percent, when compared to the FY22 mid-year budget.

Mayor Webber's administration has built up the City's "rainy day funds," or reserves, which have enabled the City to continue investing in the City's core services and prioritize funding service delivery levels to build and support our community initiatives throughout the pandemic. Reserves are intentionally built-up during years of revenue growth with the prospect of using the reserves to help during times of financial hardship or uncertainty. As of midyear, the FY22 Budget includes use of $40 million of these "rainy day funds," or reserves, to limit the reduction of service levels and to support one-time expenses such as expansion of the Airport, building of the South Side Teen Center, renovation of BC Pool as well as funding critical operational needs such as road rehabilitation, retention incentives for City employees, and hiring incentives for new employees. Overall, the FY23 budgeted revenues reflect an addition of $26.4 thousand into cash reserves.

As was done in FY22, adjustments to the operating budget may be likely in the coming fiscal year. If additional funding becomes available during FY23, City staff is committed to bringing forward budget adjustments in order to continue to invest in critical service areas that are identified throughout the upcoming budget hearings.

V. EXPENDITURES

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

RICHARD BROWN, COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DIRECTOR

Department Mission

The mission of the Community Development Department is to create a Santa Fe where business, residents, and tourists thrive through effective land use, housing affordability, arts and culture, available jobs, business expansion, and resiliency. The Department also allows alignment of programs and funding, focused on housing, cultural and economic opportunities, which connect core components of our land use planning and development to our longstanding need for additional affordable housing, economic mobility, and ensuring a cultural connection to our history.

Department Description of Services

The Department is made up of the following: Affordable Housing, Arts and Culture, Economic Development, Planning and Land Use, and Tourism.

The Community Development Department will also be deploying federal economic stimulus aid that was approved in the American Recovery Plan Act (ARPA) for the City of Santa Fe which will support the City's expansion of key social services and provide support to businesses over the next 3 years.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

ALEXANDRA LADD, AFFORDABLE HOUSING DIRECTOR

Mission

The Office of Affordable Housing works proactively with public, nonprofit, and private sectors to increase affordable housing opportunities for Santa Fe's low- and moderate-income residents, addressing the needs of all residents from the homeless to the homeowner.

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

Description of Services

Office of Affordable Housing has a long history of supporting affordable housing through regulation (inclusionary zoning), policy (1999 General Plan, Consolidated Plan, Five-Year Strategic Plan, and Analysis of Fair Housing), real estate development (Tierra Contenta and donation of City-owned land), and programming (financial support for homebuyer training/counseling, home repair, down payment assistance, and rental assistance). Housing needs are addressed across a spectrum, from the homeless to the homeowner, and rely on an established network of community partners, including the public, nonprofit, and private sectors. To this end, the bulk of the proposed budget is used to support staff time to administer federal grant money from HUD (CDBG and Continuum of Care/Shelter Plus Care), general funds to sub-recipients who, in turn, provide services directly to those in need, and implementation of Chapter 26. This chapter includes the Santa Fe Homes Program (SFHP), which requires a percentage of housing built by private developers to be set aside for income-certified, low- and moderate-income residents, the Affordable Housing Trust Fund (funded through local development revenues), and fair housing.

FY23 Recommended Budget

The Affordable Housing Department's FY23 Recommended Budget totals $4.9 million. The City's investment in the Affordable Housing Department has increased by $3.3 million, or 197 percent, when compared to pre-pandemic levels in FY19. The Department's FY23 Recommended Budget decreased by $2.8 million, or 36.1 percent, from FY22 budgeted levels. The decrease was for a contract funding that was carried forward from FY21 into FY22 that was a one-time expense. The Department's General Fund FY23 Recommended Budget increased by $210,000, or 19.3 percent, from FY22 budgeted levels. The FY23 Recommended Budget includes the following:

- Funding for an 8 percent salary increase for non-union and exempt employees. Funding for the amount equivalent to an 8 percent increase to salary, and all salary-dependent benefits, for members of AFSCME Local 3999 is held in a collective bargaining reserve in the HR Budget.
- $150,000 for consultation contract for Affordable Housing Planning.
- The City continues its commitment to Affordable Housing allocating $3 million to the Affordable Housing Trust Fund.
- Funding to provide affordable housing subsidies through the General Fund and through the federal Community Development Block Grant.

The Division will build a program or project, find funding to support it, and eventually transition it to an internal service (city-led) or external (non-project/business) partner. Ultimately, it is not our goal to be a direct service entity but to incubate programs and support innovative ideas, research, and data, in order to advance the social priorities of the City.

BRIAN WILLIAMS, EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT & SAFETY DIRECTOR

SAFETY

BARBARA LUJAN, HEALTH, SAFETY AND COMPLIANCE OFFICER

The Safety Office is the point of contact for compliance for all state, federal, and local enforcement of laws and regulations ensuring workplace safety. A safety office makes financial sense as we can develop training platforms to reduce on-the-job injuries. In turn, with safe practices, the financial impact is less and can save the City money for additional safety training as laws and regulations change. Employee morale is evident, because the employee feels valued by the City. Their health and wellbeing matters; they are more likely to feel a collective belonging and feel happier working here. When an employee uses equipment that does not work properly and is injured, the cost to the City is greater than the cost of fixing the equipment. The Safety Office provides consultation on preparing Job Hazard Assessment to employees and supervisors. In addition, we coordinate all mandated Safety Training per Safety Training Policy. We are responsible for New Employee Safety Orientation (NESO).

The Safety Office participates in the Health and Safety Committee made up of management and union members. Safety is responsible for all Workers' Compensation claims, follow up with providers, employees, TPA insurance adjusters, supervisors, and other members of management. The Office is also responsible for entry and completion of OSHA 300 Log and 300A Logs each year. We also provide information to OSHA, as requested, when there is an inspection or a citation is issued.

The Safety Office is responsible for policy development to either update or author new policies. The Office is also responsible for issuing driving permits and conducting Defensive Driving Courses. We partner with vendors to provide training as needed or on an annual basis. We issue safety supplies as needed and requested. We also purchase specific safety equipment for departments that are not classified as enterprise departments.

Training

The City of Santa Fe Fire Department Training Office relies upon and follows state statutes and guidelines as well as national standards and best practices to provide comprehensive training across all disciplines the Department needs to perform. The focus is on high quality content distribution and skills performance rather than simply fulfilling education hours. In short, the following organizations and documents dictate or guide training hours offered: National Registry of EMT's, New Mexico EMS Bureau, New Mexico State Statute, National Fire Protection Association, New Mexico Firefighters Training Academy, Occupational Safety and Health Administration, SFFD/SFFA CBA, Rules and Regulations and Standard Operating Guidelines, and the Insurance Services Office. In addition to internal training, the Training Office plans for and conducts the SFFD Recruit Academy upon hiring of new personnel and multiple nationally offered trainings in collaboration with the State Fire Marshal's Office and the National Fire Academy. Upon request, the Training Office helps other City departments and schools with training and fire safety education.

Health & Safety

The Department's Health and Safety Officer monitors and provides education and policies to the Department surrounding our members' health and wellbeing. This includes annual physicals for all personnel, proactive health screenings, monitoring of hazardous materials exposures and developing policies that target a firefighter's increased risk of contracting cancer. The Health & Safety Officer also helps evaluate and purchase all personnel protective clothing for the Department.

Fire Prevention

The City of Santa Fe Fire Department Fire Prevention Office works to reduce property loss and the number of fire related incidents in the City of Santa Fe. This is done through a number of specific programs. Plan review is done cooperatively with the Planning & Land Use Department on all properties within certain parameters and for all developments. Inspections are done annually on businesses and certain high risk use properties and business types, and according to local resolution. Code enforcement is done periodically, unannounced for certain occupancies, and as requested by complaint or for follow-up. All inspections, plan reviews, and enforcement are done to City Council approved International Code Council standards by Fire Prevention staff, which consists of the Fire Marshal, Deputy Fire Marshal, and three Fire Inspectors. In addition, the Fire Prevention staff works to affect public relations and public education with hundreds of scheduled events and visits to every school within the City.

Wastewater Division

- Funding in the Wastewater Division includes $250,000 for a master plan and $150,000 for verification of regulatory reporting, recommendations on process modifications, and the provision of process and safety training.
- Funding to create one (1) Journeyman Electrician position in the Wastewater Division.
- The Public Utilities Budget includes a $500,000 to create a Clean Energy Fund. This Fund would be used to reduce the city's carbon footprint and move rapidly toward meeting its 2040 carbon neutral goals. Transitioning away from carbon sources requires renewable energy-based electricity and electrifying gas appliances, coupled with energy efficiency. Energy efficiency has been shown to be one of the least cost mechanisms for reducing carbon emissions. A Clean Energy Fund would contract with a provider in order to provide low-cost capital, loan-loss reserves to reduce lending risk, and other mechanisms necessary to enable Santa Fe households to access rooftop solar and energy efficiency, focusing particularly on lower-income communities. The money would be used initially to contract with a non-profit to provide research and a business plan for an ongoing Clean Energy Fund (or Green Bank); to look for grants from Federal and State governments; and to identify ways to provide financial support for Santa Fe residents who would reduce their own and the community's carbon foot print by a variety of means including but not limited to energy conservation, solarization, and other investments and strategies that would help the City meet its sustainability goals as the return on investment.

VI. FY23 REVENUE AND ECONOMIC ANALYSIS

Santa Fe remains in a strong fiscal position through the conclusion of FY22 and leading into FY23. High levels of consumer spending and a strong employment market will compete against an expanding number of headwinds, including inflation, higher interest rates, and current geopolitical risks. The most likely revenue scenario is a positive, albeit slowing, economic growth trend through FY23. Recurring City revenues are forecast to exceed pre-pandemic levels due to stronger gross receipts tax collections, the implementation of internet sales tax in FY22 and inflation. All other revenues are expected to see stable but more modest growth. The City continues to be in a solid financial position, while exercising caution in response to mixed economic signals.

Bolstered by unprecedented stimulus spending, economic growth surged in 2021. Real GDP expanded 5.7 percent¹ in 2021, after contracting 3.4 percent in 2020, the highest annual growth rate observed since 1984. While this represents an incredible economic recovery, it has come with significant concerns. Inflation reached 7.0 percent in 2022. Real wages in the U.S. during the same period grew only 5.1 percent. Consumer and retail spending remain high, and there are nearly two available positions for every unemployed worker. Some commodity prices reached record highs in the last year, and supply chains remained strained following the pandemic-related recovery.

This presents a complex scenario as we examine the year ahead. Economic growth is expected to continue. Consumer spending remains high, and job growth remains consistent. Strong continued spending, higher prices, and a robust tourism sector are likely to keep major revenue sources strong in Santa Fe over the next year. However, headwinds exist as we enter FY23. The Federal Reserve will try to strike a delicate balance in raising interest rates to substantially lower inflation while not propelling the economy into a recession. High interest rates will likely outweigh limited supply in reducing the unabating growth in real estate prices. Vigorous wage growth has been partially eroded by continued inflation, which has spread from energy and automobiles into other sectors of the economy. Municipalities should expect both elevated revenues and greater expenses through this economic cycle.

The city of Santa Fe has recovered faster than much of New Mexico, with the county maintaining a 5.0 percent unemployment rate in February 2022. Robust retail spending, and a strong recovery in the tourism sector helped improve City revenues drastically between FY21 and FY22. Gross receipts tax distributions are on track to reach $133.8 million in FY22 and $137.7 million in FY23. Lodger's tax revenues have likewise improved with the continued recovery of the tourism sector and are expected to reach $12.9 million in FY23. All Funds revenues for the City of Santa Fe should reach approximately $382.9 million in FY23, buoyed by a strong, but slowing, economic recovery.

The following subsections provide a summary of both revenue history and projections to assist in budgetary planning during FY23. Budget projections utilized multiple economic models to provide a scientific estimate of future revenues: trend analysis, regression analysis, and multifactor econometric models. The overall picture is quite strong, but high inflation, changing monetary policy, and geopolitical risk add to potential doldrums entering FY23.

National Economic Outlook

After the economic challenges that characterized FY20, the surge in economic growth since that time has proven remarkable and unprecedented. Stimulus spending via the $2.2 trillion CARES Act, $1.9 trillion American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA), and additional legislative stimulus packages bolstered spending. Asset prices surged, driven by both historically low mortgage and financing rates, as well as substantial support from the Federal Reserve. The resilience of the growing economy will be tested in FY23, as the Federal Reserve seeks to reign in surging inflation and geopolitical risks, such as the ongoing war in Ukraine, add to economic uncertainty.

Consensus estimates, as of March 2022, estimate that real GDP growth will expand by 3.0 percent in 2022 and lower 2.3 percent in 2023. There is considerable uncertainty in these estimates, particularly regarding how the economy will respond to policy initiatives by the Federal Reserve (see 'Federal Reserve' below). Unemployment across the United States has dropped to 3.8 percent, representing a value close to 'full employment', and is expected to drop further in 2022 into 2023. Inflation estimates have been repeatedly revised, but current consensus estimates suggest inflation should drop to a 3 percent annual rate in 2023 after peaking in the second quarter of 2022.

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

Taking a closer look at unemployment, the economic recovery has resulted in widespread job gains over the last two years. Some sectors that were particularly affected by the recession have not yet recovered full employment, notably the leisure and hospitality sector. Other sectors driven by a rapid increase in demand, such as trade and transportation, now employ more workers than before the pandemic. Public sector employment has likewise lagged in its recovery. Retail spending has surged dramatically over the last two years. While growth has since plateaued, aggregate spending remains roughly 25 percent above pre-pandemic levels. While this may continue, higher prices will put pressure on consumers to purchase fewer goods. This may lead to a cycle of lower firm profits and reinvestment, potentially slowing economic growth substantially.

Meanwhile, the labor market remains particularly tight. There are nearly two open jobs for each unemployed worker, and quit rates remain near record highs of nearly 3.0 percent per month. Employees are being more selective about work, changing jobs due to flexibility, health, and salary concerns, contributing to a wider scale transformation of the labor force. Meanwhile, the number of job openings remains above 11 million, near record highs. Skill and salary mismatch between employers and prospective employees remains a concern. Likewise, the international migration that has historically been highly responsive to economic need has been drastically reduced during the last five years. As a consequence, employers are finding it more difficult to find and hire employees at current wages. Sectors experiencing the greatest shortages of workers, such as leisure and hospitality, are also experiencing the greatest year over year wage increases. The labor market is likely to continue to be strong through FY23.

Inflation

Inflation has lasted longer and reached higher levels than previously anticipated by markets. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) has surged across many asset classes, reaching the highest level in 40 years. Rapidly surging demand for goods, following pandemic closures in 2020, left many firms unprepared; global supply chains quickly broke down, and products from silicon chips to food products suffered shortages. Silicon chip shortages led to reduced production of new vehicles in 2021 and contributed to the price increases in used vehicles of over 40 percent. Oil prices, exacerbated by the Russian invasion of Ukraine, reached the highest levels seen in 14 years. This resulted in record-high gas prices, in nominal, but not inflation-adjusted terms, and contributed to higher distribution costs and accelerating inflation in food prices.

Oil is a globally traded commodity, and often responds significantly to changes in supply and demand. In 2020, oil prices dropped precipitously as demand in the pandemic recession was drastically reduced. In 2022, geopolitical risks driven by the Russian invasion of Ukraine, and corresponding sanctions, led oil prices to surge further. Oil prices are notoriously hard to predict given this volatility and models to estimate oil prices produce a wide range of potential values.

Data Source: Author's Own Projections

Higher oil prices are likely to remain throughout 2022, contributing to higher fuel costs. Resolution of the current geopolitical conflicts and increasing production will likely contribute to lower prices. Surging production and improved technology over the last decade has helped the United States become the world's largest oil producer. However, production dropped significantly in 2020. While not yet recovered, oil production is gradually rising.

Federal Reserve

To help control inflation, the Federal Reserve has two significant tools at their disposal. The first is hiking the interest rate, which began in March 2022 and is expected to continue for the rest of the year. By increasing interest rates, the Federal Reserve increases borrowing costs for the economy – slowing growth and also inflation. The Federal Reserve may also begin unwinding its significant balance sheet, which includes $9 trillion in assets. Roughly two-thirds of the Federal Reserve’s assets are treasury securities, and one-quarter a mixture of Federal agency debt and mortgage-backed securities. Originally purchased to keep the treasury and mortgage markets liquid and solvent, these repurchases are a key instrument in monetary policy when interest rates are low. In theory, repurchases of long-term securities increased their prices and reduced their yield². As the Federal Reserve sells these securities, this will put upward pressure on long-term rates. Mortgage rates, a key component of the housing boom, are expected to rise.

Economically, this has some important implications. If the Federal Reserve increases rates and unwinds the balance sheet too quickly, economic growth can rapidly diminish. Likewise, if the Federal Reserve raises rates too slowly, inflation may persist. Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell has expressed confidence in the ability of the Federal Reserve to navigate these demands without pushing the economy into a recession. One key element, visible in the next figure, is the yield curve, a chart of US treasury security yields across different maturities. Traditionally, the yield curve is upward sloping – longer securities provide higher interest rates to compensate investors for long-term risk. This also implies economic growth. When the yield curve is not upwardly sloping, we call this an ‘inverted’ yield curve. When short term rates exceed (or are equal to) long term rates, it implies the Federal Reserve will have to ‘cut’ short term rates in the future – implying a future recession. All recessions over the last five decades have been preceded by inverted yield curves, which often occur in the following one to two years.

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

Yield curve inversion in 2022 is a distinct possibility and has already occurred for the 2 year -10 year window of treasury bonds. As the Federal Reserve increases short term rates, the left side of the yield curve will rise; as the Federal Reserve unwinds the balance sheet, the hope is that long-term rates will also follow. As of March 2022, the rapidly diminishing spread between the 2-yr and 10-yr government bonds are taken as warning signals by some investors³. This will have greater implications for the national economy as we enter FY24.

Real Estate

Real estate prices surged 18.8 percent in the Case-Shiller U.S. National Home Price Index between December 2020 and December 2021. Despite some recovery following the pandemic, the real estate market remains affected by low supply and high demand for new homes. Over the next year, rising mortgage rates will likely dampen housing growth despite supply constraints in major markets. Real estate price growth exceeded the national average in much of the intermountain west. Mortgage delinquencies remain near fifteen-year lows and remain relatively flat.⁴

30-year fixed mortgage rates increased drastically in the first quarter of 2022. Where average rates stood at 2.65 percent in January 2021, rates as of mid-March 2022 averaged 4.42 percent. Put into perspective, monthly payments on a $350,000 property would rise from $1,410 in January 2021 to $1,757 today – an increase that stands to reduce demand for real estate.

FISCAL YEAR 2023 - RECOMMENDED BUDGET

Growth at current levels is ultimately unsustainable in the market for a long time. Banks remain in a strong capital position, and it's unlikely any price decreases in the future will be abrupt and panic-driven. Rather, as housing supply responds to demand and rates increase, growth rates should decline to long-term averages by 2023.

Air Travel

As of March 2022, airline passenger traffic has almost fully recovered from the pandemic and is tracking near 2019 volumes. This trend will likely continue, driven by strong consumption and moderate economic growth. While additional pandemic and geopolitical effects are possible, large-scale disruption remains unlikely.

State and Local Economy

During 2021, New Mexico's economy recovered significantly, but continues to trail the rest of the country. New Mexico unemployment as of February 2022 stands at 5.6 percent and ranks 50th in the United States. Unemployment in New Mexico often follows this pattern: with a labor force composed of higher numbers of government workers and few large private companies, New Mexico spends a longer time recovering after financial recessions than other states. Likewise, these same affects insulate New Mexico from worse outcomes during recessions. During the 2020 pandemic recession, New Mexican unemployment remained below 10 percent while national unemployment reached 14.7 percent.

The pandemic caused significant disorder in New Mexico's labor market. The size of the labor force dropped from 970,000 to 901,000 between January and April 2020. Unemployed New Mexicans grew in the same period from 51,000 to 86,000. Since then, the labor force has mostly rebounded to 947,000, a figure which includes 53,000 unemployed workers. The loss of 23,000 workers to the New Mexico economy will likely take longer to replace, and labor force participation rates stand at 56.7 percent. Apart from the further drop during the pandemic, participation rates remain at their lowest levels on record going back to 1976.

Between February 2021 and February 2022, employment in mining and logging grew by 7.4 percent; employment in manufacturing grew 7.3 percent, and construction employment grew 6.8 percent. The lowest performing job sectors of the last year were financial activities (-0.9 percent); education and health services (1.5 percent), and other services (1.5 percent). Strong demand for positions in trade and transportation have left over 140,000 New Mexicans employed in this sector, higher than pre-pandemic levels.

Data Source: The Bureau of Labor Statistics

In comparison with the rest of New Mexico, Santa Fe maintains proportionately greater employment in the government and travel and leisure sectors, with fewer employed in professional services or manufacturing. Employment peaked in late 2019 in Santa Fe County, with fewer than 2,700 unemployed residents out of a labor force of 76,000. Preliminary data from January 2022 indicates unemployment has fallen to just 3,600 residents out of a civilian labor force of 72,800.

Hotel occupancy in Santa Fe recovered impressively since 2020. Hotel occupancy in 2021 ranged from 25.8 percent in January to 81.7 percent in July, with values tracking only slight lower than pre-pandemic levels in 2019. Using STR data, mid-range projected hotel occupancy in 2022 is expected to exceed 2021 levels and match or exceed the levels observed in 2019. While the pandemic continues, and additional disruptions from viral variants remains a possibility, consumer travel is likely to continue to expand in response to pandemic openings and easing mandates that occurred in early Spring 2022. Occupancy should continue to peak between June and October around or above 80 percent occupancy, improving lodgers' tax revenues substantially.

The restaurant industry is expected to continue robust performance despite existing labor shortages. Data from OpenTable suggests that after the catastrophic conditions in the industry in 2020, 2021 dining levels met and even exceeded levels last seen in 2019. While New Mexico initially lagged the rest of the country in the recovery of this industry, by April 2021, New Mexico had effectively ‘caught up’ with the United States and seated diners exceeded US levels by fall 2021. This trajectory is expected to continue, with restaurants continuing to operate near full capacity in 2022 and into FY23.

Real estate values expanded significantly in Santa Fe during the last year. Bolstered by high demand and low inventory, the median price of a home sold in Santa Fe in January 2022 reached $479,500 (up from $388,750 in 2020) and across New Mexico in January 2022 reached $292,268 (up from $219,500 two years prior). Low mortgage rates further increased property values substantially, and Santa Fe remains one of the most expensive New Mexico communities to purchase a home.

Data from Zillow demonstrated that Santa Fe has reached a median price of $527 thousand. While projections were not available for the Santa Fe metropolitan area, growth in prices is expected to continue throughout FY22 and into FY23. From February 2021 to February 2022, real estate prices in the Santa Fe area grew 19.5 percent, higher than national average. Active listings in 2022 remain far below pre-pandemic levels, and the average days for a house to be on the market remains an incredible 31 days (down from 83 in 2020).

Construction continues to be robust, with overall construction employment remaining unchanged in Santa Fe during the pandemic. New building permits for residential houses has continued a boom dating back to 2019, with new private housing permits steady at around 60 units per month since late 2020. Higher construction levels expand both the population of the city as well as its tax revenues, both in terms of property taxes and gross receipts taxes (GRT).

Labor and Workforce

With 87,505 people⁵ (US Census Bureau 2020 Census, Santa Fe represents roughly 4 percent of the 2.1 million residents of New Mexico. Demographically, the population of Santa Fe is older (23.7 percent of the population is over 65), wealthier (per capita income is roughly 36 percent above the state average) and maintains a lower poverty rate than the state as a whole. Over 12 percent of all New Mexico consumer spending on accommodation and food services during the year occurs in the City of Santa Fe. Retail sales per capita is over 2.5 times the state average. 42 percent of Santa Fe's population possesses a college degree, far above the state levels. Santa Fe maintains a workforce nearly as diverse as the state of New Mexico itself: the population is 54.7 percent Hispanic or Latino, 1.4 percent Black or African American, 1.6 percent Native American, and 7.3 percent multiracial. 14.2 percent of the city is foreign born.

Historically, the strength of the government and tourism industries has helped keep employment in the city below state and national averages. Employment tends to be seasonal, with greater unemployment in summer. The city has over 12,000 firms, and 85 percent of the city's labor force is employed in nonfarm payrolls representing roughly 61,800 workers. Of nonfarm employment, 23.5 percent of the city is employed in government, 17.3 percent in education and health services, 17.2 percent in leisure and hospitality, and 16.3 percent in trade, transportation, and utilities.

Unemployment in Santa Fe (5.0 percent in January 2022) is lower than in New Mexico as a whole (5.9 percent) but substantially higher than national levels (4.0 percent in January). While the city typically maintains lower unemployment than the state of New Mexico, the disproportionate size of the city's accommodation, restaurant, and retail sectors makes the city particularly vulnerable to pandemic closures. Normal unemployment for the last ten years hovers between 5 percent and 6 percent. Exceptionally low unemployment, mirroring the trend nationally, occurred in 2018 and 2019 with unemployment levels falling below 4 percent of the labor force. Projecting the unemployment rate forward using an Autoregressive Integrated Moving Average, also known as an ARIMA model, generates a trend approaching the long-term unemployment average. In turn, the model has also been adjusted for seasonality to depict year-on-year variation in employment in the hospitality and tourism sectors.

As anticipated, both Santa Fe and New Mexico witnessed rapid recovery in unemployment levels following national trends. The leisure and hospitality sector, hardest hit by the pandemic, has recovered to include approximately 10,600 workers, nearly 1,700 below the highest level achieved pre-pandemic (July 2019) and 700 fewer workers in January 2020. Labor shortages across the industry led to a spike of 13.3 percent in wages in this sector during 2021, one of few sectors to experience wage-growth that exceeded inflation. With the Santa Fe tourism market running close to pre-pandemic capacity in most areas, employment will likely continue to rise through summer while remaining slightly below pre-pandemic levels.

Across other sectors, employment in February 2022 was mainly higher than the previous year and close to pre-pandemic highs. Preliminary numbers in February 2022 indicate only 14,500 workers associated with government in Santa Fe, almost 1,000 fewer workers month over month than in 2022. Going back ten years, government employment both in nominal terms and as a percentage of the labor force has been declining and is unlikely to fully recover.

During 2020 and 2021, many firms in Santa Fe were able to maintain payrolls through the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP). In total, over $217 million was disbursed to Santa Fe businesses in the first stimulus, with $2.3 billion extended to the state. These loans, which can be forgiven, supported over 24,000 jobs in the city and likely prevented more egregious economic consequences. Three of the five largest Santa Fe Metropolitan Area employers are government-based. Healthcare and tribal employment are also substantial drivers of local employment.

Tax Revenue and Projection Estimation

Santa Fe tax revenue is primarily generated from gross receipts tax (GRT), lodgers' tax, property tax, gasoline tax, and franchise fees. To predict these values in FY23 and beyond, a rigorous economic analysis was applied. First, historical data was evaluated against a series of broader economic variables, including GDP, wage growth, industrial production, housing starts, unemployment, and inflation. Unemployment was a statistically significant driver of GRT and lodgers' tax; property tax was statistically correlated to both GRT and population size. Local economic data can be challenging to predict, particularly in an unprecedented pandemic and economic crisis. However, national economic drivers are less volatile, and predicting these values can provide insight to the future revenue drivers of the City of Santa Fe.

Once this was established, recurring revenue streams were subjected to three different projection models. First, an economic trend analysis was established to evaluate future rates based on past growth. Trend models are efficient and easy to construct, but unusual or seasonal values can distort the projections. To correct for this, the model omitted extreme values from consideration in the analysis. Secondly, a regression model was employed derived from historical data. Regressions, unlike trend analysis, factor in all relevant data points to make projections and utilize a consistent methodology. However, regressions are most effective when the data and assumptions of past periods apply to future periods. Lastly, the model employed a multifactor econometric model that was derived from projections of the economic state prior to the 2020 pandemic. These models can be incredibly effective, but the variables utilized have to be continually monitored to ensure an accurate prediction. To provide a more seasoned analysis, the final projection averaged all three of these models to produce an estimate of value.

For non-recurring revenues, including over 800 revenue source line-items in the budget, a combination of trend and regression modeling was used depending on the quality of the historical data. Smaller, non-recurring revenue sources are more volatile, increasing modeling difficulty. Whenever possible, the analysis errs on a conservative projection of forecasted revenues, although significant uncertainty remains.

Recurring Revenues

Recurring revenue received by the City is categorized as cyclical revenue, typically received monthly, quarterly or annually from funding sources and is reasonably expected to be available on a recurring basis. This revenue is under normal circumstances predictable and historically stable. Most recurring revenue is received from the collection of taxes and fees & fines at 44 percent and 35 percent, respectively. The remainder of the revenues come from grants, rents, royalties, and concessions, licenses and permits, interest income from investments and miscellaneous revenues. Containment efforts for the virus have translated in declines in the City's recurring revenues primarily in the form of lower sales tax and lodgers tax collections and fees collected for services such as parking and recreation activities.

Gross Receipts Tax

Gross receipts tax (GRT) represents the largest single source of non-fee revenue for the City of Santa Fe, approximately 37 percent of total revenues into all funds. The combined 2021 gross receipt tax rate for Santa Fe is 8.44 percent, with 5.13 percent going to the state of New Mexico and the remaining 3.31 percent collected and distributed by the New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department (NM TRD) to the City.

The continued economic growth rate, strong consumer sales, and the nearly full recovery of the travel and leisure market will likely keep GRT growth strong over the current economic cycle. In FY22, Santa Fe's GRT has also been bolstered by the inclusion of internet sales taxes, which contributed to elevated GRT levels and will continue to do so. Further, while inflation increases the price of goods and erodes the purchasing power of consumers, it increases the price of the taxable goods and further increases GRT distributions even as additional city expenses may increase.

The economic stimulus and progress towards reopening the economy boosted FY21 revenues. GRT collections in FY21 totaled $112.8 million after a strong consumer-spending driven recovery in the last half of the fiscal year. GRT collections in FY22 are estimated to be $133.8 million. Collected revenues from July 2021 through January 2022 were 34.8 percent above the same period in FY21 and 15.8 percent higher than pre-pandemic revenues in FY20. FY23 revenues are estimated to continue to grow, albeit more modestly, and approach $137.7 million.

Property Tax

Property taxes are levied on real and personal property annually by the Santa Fe County Assessor to establish a value for property tax to be levied. Santa Fe County collects and distributes the City of Santa Fe's allocation back to the City on a monthly basis. In past years, property tax revenues have ranged from $10.8 million in FY19, $10.9 million in FY20, and $10.5 million in FY21. During FY22 and FY23, property tax revenue is estimated to grow modestly to $10.9 million and $11.1 million, respectively. Increasing property values and residential occupancy growth should expand the property tax collections over the next three to five years, resuming the period of steady growth that began following the 2008-2009 economic recession.

Franchise Fees

Franchise fees are collected for services provided within the City. Typically, franchise fees are collected from electric services, natural gas, water, cable, telecom and telephone service providers and based on consumer use. Franchise fees collected have increased from $4.8 million in FY19 and $5.1 million in FY20 to $5.2 million in FY21, in line with prior estimates. In FY22 the budgeted amount for all franchise fees is $3.8 million and $5.7 in FY23.

Lodgers' Tax

The City of Santa Fe charges a lodgers' tax of 7 percent on the price of hotel, motel, and short-term rentals. Prior to the pandemic, lodgers' tax collections grew faster than any other recurring revenue source in Santa Fe at an 8 percent annual rate between FY15 and FY19. Lodgers' tax collections remain strong seasonally, with the greatest collections occurring from June through October of each calendar year. After peaking at $12.5 million in revenues in FY19, collections proved uniquely vulnerable to the COVID-19 pandemic: year-over-year revenue declined 81 percent between May 2019 and May 2020. In 2020, 98,479 passengers utilized the Santa Fe Regional Airport, roughly one third the 283,238 passengers who utilized the airport in 2019 and mirroring national trends. However, passenger traffic surged back to 190,456 in 2021 as travelers returned to Santa Fe. In the last three months of 2021, passenger traffic exceeded the last three months of 2019. Continued tourism, combined with the revival of both cultural and corporate events in Santa Fe, are expected to continue to boost lodger's tax revenues in FY22 and FY23.

With consistently high figures for occupancy and revenue per available room in Santa Fe across most of calendar year 2021 and into 2022, FY22 and FY23 lodgers' tax should meet or exceed distributions from the pre-pandemic years. Due to the uncertainty of the recovery last year at this time, lodgers tax revenues were budgeted at $8.7 million for FY22. Lodgers tax revenue collections are forecasted to be at least $11.0 million in FY22 and $12.9 million in FY23. The continued strong economic recovery will assure continued demand for hotels. The risk of additional variants might impede travel temporarily, but the larger variable will be the state of the economy as we approach FY24.

Gasoline Tax

The gasoline tax levies a tax on fuel consumption in Santa Fe. Gasoline is considered a relatively inelastic economic good, since changes in price do not substantially affect demand. However, technological improvement in the fuel efficiency of vehicles, electric cars, and public transportation all serve to reduce aggregate gasoline consumption. Further, Santa Fe's gasoline demand also depends highly on tourism and other external economic factors. Over the prior 12 years, gasoline tax collections have varied from $1.3 to $1.5 million. FY21 gasoline tax revenues grew to $1.6 million. Gas tax revenues were budgeted at $1.2 million in FY22 but are forecasted at $1.6 million in FY22. Gas tax revenues are budgeted at $1.2 million in FY22 $1.7 million in FY23.

Excise Tax on Recreational Sales of Cannabis

On April 1, 2022, recreational marijuana use was legalized in New Mexico, and as of March 2022, 225 recreational licenses were approved. Greater consumption (and acceptance of consumption) has resulted in greater revenues in states in the years following legalization. Annual growth rates in tax revenue have grown robustly in the years after recreational cannabis legalization across many states; in Colorado, tax revenues grew 46 percent, 31 percent, and 15 percent in the three years after legalization. In New Mexico, the first week of recreational cannabis sales generated approximately $6.1 million in total revenues. Two-thirds of the excise tax on recreational sales in New Mexico goes to the state and one-third goes to local municipalities. In FY21, Santa Fe represented approximately 5 percent of the state's total taxable GRT revenues, so recreational cannabis sales may be proportional to that value or may be greater due to the tourism industry in Santa Fe. The City will monitor recreational cannabis sales patterns over the first year to validate if these projections and estimates come to fruition. Additional growth in GRT revenues and revenues from the recreational cannabis excise tax are likely, but not included at this point in the FY23 budgeted revenues due to uncertainty in sales and revenues in the first year of legalization.

Licenses and Permits

Licenses and permits are comprised of revenue from business licenses, building and zoning permits, liquor licenses, and street and park permits. FY19 revenue received for licenses and permits was $3.9 million; in FY20 it totaled $4.5 million, and FY21 it totaled $3.9 million. Continued growth is anticipated in this sector as the economy recovers and construction remains strong, with $3.7 million budgeted in FY22 and $6.3 million in FY23.

Fees and Services

Fees and services seek to recover the full cost of services provided by the City directly to residents. The City provides a wide array of fee-generating services, which include: airport fees, ambulance fees, civic center fees, housing fees, impact fees, insurance premiums, meals fees, parking fees, land use fees, police and court fees, public transportation fees, recreation fees, water, wastewater and solid waste fees, and other miscellaneous fees. Fees and services collected in FY19 totaled $120 million, in large part from water, wastewater and solid waste fees, and parking fees. The FY20 fees and service revenue was $129.2 million. In FY21, fees and permits totaled $117.1 million, which is budgeted at $129.4 million FY22 and projected at $134.0 million in FY23.

Fines and Forfeitures

Fines and forfeitures is made up of parking fines, traffic and water violations, and court and library fines. Collections totaled $1.1 million in FY19, $9 thousand in FY20, and only $200 thousand in FY21. Due to the continued economic recovery, expected fines and forfeitures will reach close to $900 thousand in FY22 and FY23.

Rents, Royalties, Concessions

Revenue generated from airport rental fees, equipment rentals, parks and recreation department rentals and other rentals, including land and facilities rentals, are categorized under rents, royalties, and concessions. In FY19, Santa Fe earned $2.2 million from rents, royalties, and concessions which was reduced to $2.1 million in FY20 and FY21. Rents, royalties, and concessions are expected to rise to $2.6 million in FY22 and $3.0 million in FY23.

Interest Income

In general, the City's level of investment income is a function of the balance of cash in the investment account, interest rates and the duration of the portfolio. After receiving $2.4 million in interest income in FY18, lower interest rates reduced interest collections to $120 thousand in FY19 and $83 thousand in FY20. Interest income was marginal in FY21. Higher interest rates expected at the end of FY22 and into FY23 have raised revenue expectations to $800 thousand per year.

Miscellaneous Revenue

Revenues included in this category are grants and miscellaneous revenues from bond issuance premiums and proceeds, insurance recoveries and other various small revenues.

Transfer In

Transfer in revenue is the movement of money between funds as a means of distributing revenue to the fund where it is being expended.

Nonrecurring Revenue

Nonrecurring revenue received by the City is categorized as one-time revenue. Examples include the sale of land for capital expenditures or revenue not earmarked for recurring personnel, operational or maintenance costs. The FY23 budget maintains sufficient reserves to comply with the financial policy threshold of maintaining a 10 percent General Fund Reserve. The City will be positioned to utilize the cash reserves that have accumulated as a result of conservative revenue projection, responsible budgeting, and proactive financial management in FY23.

Mayor Webber's administration has built up the City's "rainy day funds," or reserves, which have enabled the City to continue investing in the City's core services and prioritize funding service delivery levels to build and support our community initiatives throughout the pandemic. Reserves are intentionally built-up during years of revenue growth with the prospect of using the reserves to help during times of financial hardship or uncertainty. As of midyear, the FY22 Budget includes use of $40 million of these "rainy day funds," or reserves, to limit the reduction of service levels and to support one-time expenses such as expansion of the Airport, building of the South Side Teen Center, renovation of BC Pool as well as funding critical operational needs such as road rehabilitation, retention incentives for City employees, and hiring incentives for new employees. Overall, the FY23 budgeted revenues reflect an addition of $26.4 thousand into cash reserves.
