20 in school, where many of life’s most important lessons are learned; and

21 WHEREAS, Santa Fe Public Schools’ Board of Education (“BoE”) has applied for a grant 22 to establish a district-wide community schools model designed to provide a holistic and familial 23 approach to learning; and

24 WHEREAS, the grant amount can range between $250k-$500k per year for five years, an 25 amount determined by the grant reviewers; and

1 WHEREAS, a community school is a research-based, equity driven strategy that brings 2 students, families, organizations, and communities together to transform education and create well-3 rounded educational opportunities and support systems; and

4 WHEREAS, community schools vary based on the context of needs, assets, and priorities 5 of the body of students attending the school; and

6 WHEREAS, according to the New Mexico Community Schools Logic Model, which 7 outlines a long-term strategy for improving the learning environment for its students, the “theory

9 transformational changes will occur that result in healthy, secure students ready for college, career 10 and life”; and

11 WHEREAS, there are four pillars of community schools: expanded and enriched learning

21 communities; and

22 WHEREAS, active family and community engagement allows schools to function as 23 neighborhood hubs where there are educational opportunities for adults and family members to 24 share their stories and serve as equal partners in promoting student success; and

25 WHEREAS, integrated students support provides a dedicated staff member to coordinate

1 support programs to address out-of-school learning barriers for students and families and provides 2 mental and physical health services support to boost student success.
